

GRAMMER PLANS BROAD CHANGE IN D. C. SCHOOLS

District to Adopt 6-3-3 System, With Junior High After Sixth Grade.

Within a year or two the entire elementary system of the District public schools will be completely reorganized on what is known as the 6-3-3 plan, according to Assistant Superintendent of Schools Stephen E. Kramer.

Realizing that the present educational system in the grammar schools is wholly inadequate to meet the modern needs of education, and answering the long-felt criticism of the system in vogue, school officials have begun to take steps to modernize the educational system here.

This year the school budget includes appropriations for two new buildings in which the new and up-to-date system will be inaugurated and which had its inception in Washington in the Junior High School at Seventh and O streets northwest.

Form Junior High.

The plan is to re-organize the so-called "grade school," making it a sort of junior high school. The last three grades, the sixth, seventh and eighth will be run like a high school, the subjects being specialized with a teacher for each. At present the whole eight grades of the grammar school run in an unbroken and monotonous course of study.

The new plan is to make the 6-3-3 plan because there are six years of elementary education, three years of the junior high school and three years of the senior high, making twelve years of education in all just as at present.

The weakness in the present system consists in the fact that the elementary course is extended over too long a period, as in eight years of the course, and students become uninterested and monotonous and the pupils restless, many of them leaving school before reaching high school.

The age of adolescence, it is pointed out, is another factor in making change of course necessary. It is much advanced over the past ten years or so, and girls and boys require more advanced studies at the age of thirteen and fourteen than they used to.

Brighten Early Course.

A break in the course at the sixth grade, offering a wide variety of subjects with an interesting presentation by a specialized teacher, it is thought by local school officials, will do much to brighten the elementary course and make it more attractive.

Wherever it is possible the 6-3-3 plan will be extended to the grammar schools, and school officials will not wait until they get a new set of buildings, which inauguration of the system will require. It may be extended to some of the grade schools this year, Mr. Kramer said. He says that within a year or two facilities will be available to start the new system here altogether.

CHESAPEAKE TO BE ACTIVE ON LAST WEEK OF SEASON

Two excursions are scheduled for this week—the closing week—at Chesapeake Beach.

An excursion for the benefit of the Chesapeake Beach police force and the Beach Orchestra will be held Thursday. More than 2,000 are expected to attend. Capt. George Hazard, chief of police at the beach, is in charge of arrangements.

Local No. 2 of the Washington Plate Printers' Union will hold its annual outing next Saturday at the beach. George W. Jacobs, of 1115 L Street northwest, is in charge of arrangements.

All of the amusements at the beach will continue running full blast until next Sunday night, September 17, when the season formally will close, although fishing enthusiasts will continue to visit the resort until cold weather to take advantage of the finest sport so far this year. Free dancing to music by a jazz orchestra will continue as a daily feature until closing night.

TYPE PRODUCING MATERIALS OF PAST EXHIBITED

Interesting Display Opened in Smithsonian Institution Building.

There is now on exhibition in the division of graphic arts, Smithsonian building, a complete set of the materials formerly used in the production of type. All operations were carried on by hand, and it is interesting to compare this slow and laborious method with the modern type foundry, often covering acres of ground, which turns out tons of machine-made type.

The exhibit shows bars of steel from which the punches are cut; all the tools used; files with teeth so small that a microscope is needed to see them; a set of sixty-three punches and the matrices made from them; and books in the history of printing known to have been made by the efforts of one person.

Fight Idleness, Which is Hell, Says Preacher

Back to the Farm Advocate Advises Hearers to Stick to Jobs Hard.

"Keep busy. Fight the idlers, for idleness is hell."

This is the motto of the Rev. Joseph J. Higgins, archbishop of Christ's Episcopal Church, at 2300 Georgia avenue northwest, who is today conducting a nation-wide "back to the farm" movement among colored people.

This work he is carrying on through the church, the Modern Educational and Religious Bureau, of which he is treasurer, and through various race publications.

"Have the courage to admit that brain comes first, labor second, and money third in the great make-up of civilization," he says. "Obey the higher powers and make friends with your employer, and thereby you gain his confidence and have a strong protector in times of need. Get a job and stick to it regardless of public sentiment to the contrary."

"Work out your own salvation. If you cannot get a job or position in the city go back to the farm, where God first placed you, and till the soil, for verdant fields are crying for help and for masters of the soil."

CHURCH CHOR FEUD IS STILL BURNING

Mt. Vernon Tenor, Barred Two Weeks Ago, Absent at Rehearsal.

N. Conner Porter, tenor soloist of the Mt. Vernon Place M. E. Church, Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, who was asked two weeks ago not to sing at the church after public notice had been given that he would sing, did not appear for the usual rehearsal of the church choir Friday night.

Between the lines of this short news item is written a strange tale of a church feud which refuses to be smothered despite the blanket of silence with which officials of the Mt. Vernon church have endeavored to hush the outcry.

Porter has been formally informed by the church music committee, headed by T. L. Smith, that 1,500 people of the Mt. Vernon congregation of 1,800 have voiced the opinion that they would be pleased should Porter absent himself from the singing fold.

Rumors Are Rife. Telephones of church members, especially those officiating on the church music committee, were busy late Friday night, when they sought to learn from those who had attended rehearsal "whether he was there"—referring to Porter.

Porter is understood to be contemplating attendance at the church services today, but whether he will endeavor to take his usual place in the choir, or choose to participate in the services only as a member of the congregation, could not be learned last night.

Publicity resulting from the strange request of Assistant Pastor Rippy that Porter omit his solo number two weeks ago has brought several offers from other church choirs in the city, of Porter's own denomination as well as of others. Porter is understood to be awaiting the final showdown on the Mt. Vernon Place Church squabble before making other plans.

Full attendance at the choir rehearsal Friday night, due to curiosity over the possible appearance of Porter, indicates that the congregation of the church will likewise be well represented this morning. It is believed Porter will attend the services, as he is a member of the church as well as a member—or former member, which ever the music committee decides—of the choir.

Publication of the story of the strange situation at the church is said to have acted as a tonic to the church organization. Members of the choir have suddenly taken keen interest in their work, and the church members have been aroused to the advertising value of their music program.

BRICKS WORTH $132,000 MADE BY PRISONERS

Ocoquan Inmates Manufacture 500,000 Each Month for D. C. Sewers and Paving.

More than $132,000 was saved by the District government during the past twelve months by the inmates of the workhouse at Ocoquan.

This money was saved in bricks which the District would necessarily have to buy were it not for the production of them at the workhouse.

An average of 500,000 bricks are made a month at the workhouse. With brick costing approximately $22 a thousand and the output at the workhouse of 500,000 a month, it can readily be seen the great saving to the District.

Brick manufactured by the prisoners is used by the District government in building sewers, paving streets, and in building school houses.

All of the brick manufactured at the prison is brought on barges to the District's wharf at the foot of Ninth street southwest, which is in charge of John I. Fullwood. Eight negro trustees unload the brick and "hack" it for its removal to points in the district where they are needed.

Not only is brick made at the institution, but brooms and other articles which the District also uses. All the brooms, for instance, used by employees of the District government are made by the inmates of the workhouse.

There are approximately 150 prisoners at the workhouse at Ocoquan. Some are engaged as their daily task to make brick, others to make brooms, others to work on the farm from which all the vegetables used on the tables are provided, and others do other jobs.

Mr. Fullwood, the District employee in charge of the Ninth street wharf, has three assistants. They are James Hurley, David S. Reed, and J. I. Teachum. Eight trustees, originally committed to Ocoquan, are detailed to work at the Ninth street wharf under the supervision of Mr. Fullwood.

They unload an d pile the bricks from the barges from 8 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. After that time, they can use their time playing checkers, croquet, and other diversions. When the prisoners' terms expire they are replaced by new ones.

The District officials have two tugs which tow them from the Ninth street wharf to Ocoquan. All supplies, except vegetables, are sent to Ocoquan from the Ninth street wharf on the hoes boats. The barges are used for the transportation of brick from Ocoquan.

Although the inmates at Ocoquan grow all the vegetables used on the tables, and make the brick for the building of sewers, the paving of streets, and the building of school houses, the institution is not self-sustaining.

With a number of detectives, the policemen raided the poolroom and took Mandas and Morris into custody. They both were released on $5,000 bail each.

750,000 TRAVEL THROUGH GATES OF D. C. MONTHLY

Influx and Outgo of Passengers Normal Despite Business Depression.

Did you know that—Each and every day more than 750,000 persons come to and go away from Washington?

That every summer month more than 750,000 persons board and get off of trains coming to and going from Washington?

And in view of these facts, can it be said that hard times have struck Washington?

Judging from figures obtained by The Times today, the industrial condition has had little effect on Washington vacationists. Even though fares have taken a considerable jump, railroad passenger figures are running almost to normal.

July Was Big Month.

The month of July of this year was a big month at the Union Station. About 790,000 persons passed through the station, going away and coming to this city. During the same month in 1920 813,000 persons were counted, a difference of only 23,000.

During the month of June last, 755,000 persons passed through the station, compared with 756,000 during the month of June, 1920. During May, 1921, there were 685,000 persons, compared with 725,000 during May, 1920.

More Using Autos.

There is a decrease in passengers due to some extent no doubt to high railroad fares, and the fact that so many people are out of jobs.

The decrease in the cost of automobiles and the improvements of roads throughout the country have attracted thousands of persons. This has had some effect on railroad patronage.

FIND COPY OF TIMES IN CHURCH CORNERSTONE

During the raising of the old chapel in the Hebrew Congregation Cemetery, on Alabama avenue southeast, to allow for the building of a larger chapel, Harry Carroll, president of the congregation, yesterday opened the cornerstone in charge, and the contents of the new chapel were present the contents to the congregation.

The cornerstone contained a copy of the resolution authorizing the erection of the chapel, the names of the committee in charge, and the names of the members of the congregation. These papers were wrapped in a copy of The Sunday Morning Washington Times, of October 27, 1920.

The committee in charge of the building of the old chapel, appointed by the president of the congregation, Marcus Notes, consisted of A. C. Bobbs, chairman; M. Wolf, R. Goldstein, and L. H. Schloberg.

The ceremony of laying the stone, the records show, was held at the residence of M. Pelzman, on October 14, 1920.

The same procedure will be followed in the laying of the cornerstone of the new chapel next Sunday. It was stated last night by Mr. Carroll. He stated that the names of the committee in charge of the congregation and the records would be wrapped in a copy of The Sunday Morning Washington Times, of October 14, 1920.

ANNE ARUNDEL RESISTS CARBAGE BURIAL PLAN

ANNAPOLIS, Sept. 3.—Anne Arundel county will resist the plan to dispose of the garbage of the city of Baltimore by burying it at Graveyard Point on the Chesapeake Bay, two miles below this city. It has instructed its counsel, Ridgely P. Melvin, to take legal action to prevent this. A plan to bury the garbage at a point in Baltimore county was defeated through similar measures taken by the authorities of that county.

Employees of the city of Baltimore are now digging a trench at the place where it is proposed to bury the first accumulation of garbage. Officials of Baltimore claim there is urgent necessity for the prompt disposal of this garbage.

TREES TO COMPOSE THIS HALL OF FAME

Rockville D. A. R. to Honor Ten Men Who Organized County 145 Years Ago.

In honor of the ten commissioners who organized Montgomery county, Md., into a county government 145 years ago, the Janet Montgomery Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, next Tuesday afternoon will dedicate and mark ten stately trees around the courthouse at Rockville. The ten trees were registered with the American Forestry Association by Mrs. Frank Pelham Stone, of Bethesda, president of the Janet Montgomery Chapter.

The ten markers for the trees are in shape of a shield and read as follows: MEMORIAL TREE Dedicated to NATALIE MAGUIRER Commissioner Montgomery County Maryland September 6, 1776

By Janet Montgomery Chapter Daughters American Revolution

There will be a marker for each of the other nine commissioners, who were Zadok Magruder, Allen Bowie, Thomas Crumplin, Jr., John Willson, John Murdoch, Henry Griffith, Joseph Willson, James Perry and Richard Wotton.

"Many of the county's old settlers will be on hand for the program at 3:30 p. m.," said Mrs. Stone. "We hope to have a descendant of each one of the ten commissioners take part in the program. People are coming from Washington, Baltimore and other places in Maryland for the ceremony."

"These trees will be Rockville's Hall of Fame for the men who organized our county government. We feel that we are particularly fortunate in our date, the 145th anniversary of the organization of the county."

Next Tuesday's dedication is the first "Hall of Fame" idea carried out in the East, according to the records of the American Forestry Association. At Pasadena, Cal., a group of trees in a new park was recently dedicated to six famous men of the Pacific coast.

CLUB HONORS FRIEND OF U. S. FIGHTING MEN

Soldiers' and Sailors' Organization Makes H. M. Vandervort Honorary Member.

HAMLIN M. VANDERVOORT.

Hamlin M. Vandervort, deputy commissioner of pensions, a strong advocate for fair play for the former soldier, was elected an honorary member of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club, at a recent meeting of that organization at 720 Thirteenth street. He also has been invited to deliver an address on "The Men Who Followed the Colors," at the annual banquet of the club early in December.

"Among members of the House and Senate, Hamlin M. Vandervort is known as the soldier's friend," Captain J. Walter Mitchell, president of the association, said in nominating him for honorary membership. His appointment by President Harding to the deputy commissionership was a concession to the fighting men of the civil war, the war with Spain and the world war.

When his appointment was asked by the entire Republican delegation in Congress from Illinois, he was nominated by Secretary Fall, himself a Spanish war veteran, and promptly appointed by the President. "Absolute equity for our fighting men," was the slogan adopted by Mr. Vandervort as his slogan.

He was born in DeWitt county, Ill., nearly fifty-three years ago, and as a farmer's boy cultivated the prairie before about his home. He was appointed to clerkship in the Pension bureau in 1901. After studying the pension laws he was advanced to the position of principal examiner, and later became a member of the House of Representatives.

"The purpose of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club is to help the fighting men of the past and the present, and to be prominently identified with several big Washington movements in the field and winter. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Club is proud to have his name on its membership roll."

"He is a man of the hour in soldier and sailor circles," Captain Mitchell declared, "and he deserves popular with the men who have won our wars. He is taking an active part in patriotic and civic activities and will be prominently identified with several big Washington movements in the field and winter.
